Le refuge d'Arrémoulit

The Arrémoulit refuge and its lake at 2305 m are nestled in the heart of a glacial cirque formed by the walls of the highest peaks in the Ossau Valley (Palas 2974 m, Arriel 2824 m). It can be accessed without technical difficulty, allowing hikers to get close to the mineral world of the high mountains and high altitude lakes.

D Climb the winding path above the road. After crossing through the forest, you will cross a footbridge.

0h25 | 714488 E - 4746278 N Walk past a track in the undergrowth on the left and continue along the path which continues on the right through the pastures towards the bottom of the valley. Climb steadily up to a large distinctive boulder which protects the new shepherd's hut from avalanches (the old one a little further downstream has been destroyed several times).

1h30 | 715924 E - 4746786 N The path winds its way up to a scree slope; cross the scree to get over the first rise.

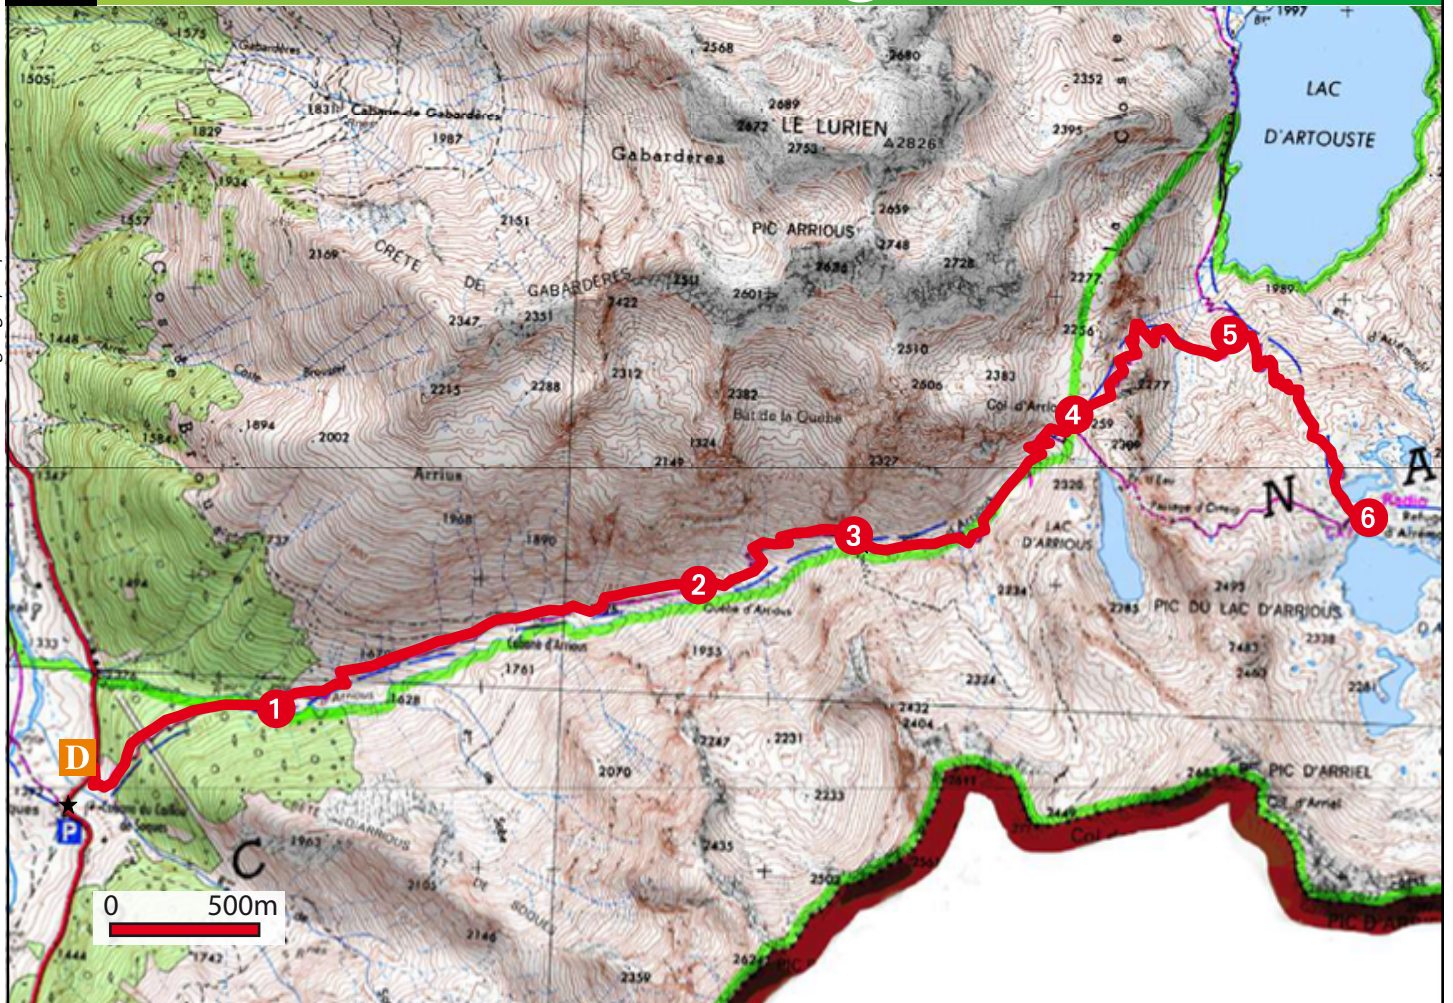

2h00 | 716483 E - 4746970 N Walk past the small, unmarked path that climbs to the right and continue along the bottom of the valley alongside the stream. Shortly afterwards, cross over and continue up the winding path to reach the second rise. Above the rise, cross a grassy flat before crossing the third and final rise that opens up onto the Col d'Arrius (signposted).

2h30 | 717184 E - 4747465 N Leave the path that goes to the right towards Lake Arrius and head straight along the path that starts the descent towards Lake Artouste, which you can see below.

Pass a small, slightly steep gully and keep walking down to a large grassy area which you cross to reach a junction (with signpost) shortly afterwards.

3h00 | 717712 E - 4747793 N Leave the path that goes down to the lake and continue to the right up the slope on well-marked zig-zags to a snow measuring pole at the top of the hill. Then the walk becomes easier and you soon arrive at the refuge. After a short descent and after passing a small lake on the right, the path goes up beneath the dam. Cross below the wall to reach the refuge.

3h40 | 718252 E - 4747179 N Refuge d'Arrémoulit (guardian present from 1/06 to 30/09). The return journey is made by the same route. You can go back to the Col d'Arrius 3 via the dizzying Passage d'Orteig (cairns and handrail), for experienced hikers only.

- The high-altitude flora
- The Arrius waterfalls and the Arremoulit lakes.

⚠ Note:

- National Park, special regulations.
- The track crosses through many herds on the grazing areas.
- This is quite a long route (on the way back, remember the climb to the Col d'Arrius). Experienced hikers may return from the refuge via the dizzying Passage d'Orteig.

The Ptarmigan

The alpine ptarmigan is a rare species in our mountains. It is found above 2000 m where it enjoys rocky terrain and high grasslands, feeding on vegetation. It is a specialist in the art of camouflage, its colour varies with the seasons, grey-brown in summer and white in winter. It is highly adaptable to the cold and can withstand the rigours of winter thanks to its dense plumage that covers its entire body. It is a relic of a bygone ice age, and its population is currently threatened by global warming.
